Communicating Energy Efficiency: What to Do (and What to Avoid) Storytelling is…

- An interaction with your audience
- Useful information in a narrative
- Motivational for your team and audience
- What your brand stands for
- Emotional and engaging
- Context, problem, solution

NOT…

- 10,000 words
- Overly technical
- An advertisement
- Boring
- Just something that happened
Before you even THINK about writing your story…

Define your audience and objectives!

- Who do you want to reach?
  - This defines your content, tone, channels and more
- What do you want your audience to think, feel and do?
  - Are you raising awareness? Calling to action?

(Do your homework)
The Trifecta of a Powerful Communication

1. Find the story
   What’s the bigger picture and why does it matter?

2. Get to the point
   Lead with the info the audience cares about most

3. Differentiate
   How is your story unique?

REI LEADS THE ZERO ENERGY PATH
REI OPENS A NET ZERO ENERGY BUILDING, AND SHARES ITS DESIGN PROCESS ON CONSTRUCTING A BUILDING THAT PRODUCES AS MUCH ENERGY AS IT USES

REI DISTRIBUTION CENTER – THE NUMBERS BEHIND ZERO ENERGY

- The facility’s 2.2 megawatt solar system produces renewable energy equivalent enough to power the entire facility annually. The system is expected to provide REI with 20 years of free energy and pay for itself in five years.
- REI and its partners have designed the industry’s first cross-channel one-touch fulfillment system, enabling one person to process items eight times faster than the typical distribution center, meaning outdoor enthusiasts will get their gear faster.
- Despite being in the middle of a desert, the distribution center will help restore the nearby Verde River by enhancing water flows and recreation access.
- The distribution center features a non-evaporative cooling system to keep employees cool in the desert heat. The system is fully powered by renewable energy and saves millions of gallons of water every year.
